As you do the library research, each partner is required to use three sources. (You may use more if you need to.) Ms. Herring will show them to you. Here are the required sources:

1. Each partner must use one database from the "START HERE" section of the Native American Tribes LibGuide on the first day.

2. Next, each partner should use the UXL Encyclopedia of Native American Tribes.

3. Your third source may be any other source from the LibGuide: an encyclopedia (print or e-book), a website, or a book all about your tribe that you find in the library catalog and check out to take home.

When you work at home, some of you can also use The First Americans. There is a chapter about the Tlingit people (Chapter 7), a chapter about the Iroquois (Chapter 12), and a chapter about the Inuit (Chapter 5). There is information about the Cheyenne and the Sioux in Chapters 8 and 9.

Start with notes about the basics here:
Location
Describe the land, weather and plants in the region of the country your people lived in, as well as the states that are there now. Use either a book about Biomes or a website called Biomes. The word "biomes" means environment or habitat.
Food
Describe the people's food and how it was obtained; be sure to emphasize any unusual or impressive techniques:
Homes
Describe the people's homes, inside and out, and how they were built:
The Topic You Want to Focus on:
It could be Family Life and Education, the artwork made by the people, an invention, or the treatment your tribe received from the settlers and the U.S. government.
